

WIRED FOR ADVENTURE

THE PURSUIT OF FREEDOM

"Adventure is worthwhile in itself."

Amelia Earhart - American aviator

It's time for your weekly hit of adventure and inspiration. Read on to start planning your 2022 adventures, find the perfect gift to put under your tree this Christmas, and take a look at perhaps the coolest opening to an adventure film ever. But first...

Descend into the depths of the Earth

Did you know that we've only discovered 1% of all the caves on Earth?

While space may be the final frontier, what lies beneath us is just as unexplored. So, if you're looking to go where no person has been before, perhaps it's time to start looking down and not up.

To climb the world's highest mountains, you need to hop on a flight to India or Nepal. But to explore some of the world's most impressive cave systems, look no further than the UK. And inside the latest volume of Wired For Adventure, you can get a taste of what it's like to descend into the depths of the Earth in our caving special. Grab your copy by clicking below.

Watch: Is this the coolest adventure film opening ever?

It may be 20 years old now, but we still think Mission Impossible 2 has one of the best opening scenes of any film. In it, international spy Ethan Hunt (played by Tom Cruise) can be seen scaling a dramatic sandstone rock face in Utah's Dead Horse Point State Park. And man, will it get your pulse racing.

Perhaps the most amazing thing is that Tom Cruise did all his own stunts for the film, so that really is him taking a leap of faith with a drop of a few hundred metres below him.

Click below to watch the full scene (it's the perfect midweek pick-me-up) and then let us know if you can think of any better outdoorsy scenes from Hollywood (an honourable mention should go to Sly Stallone's dramatic rescue attempt in Cliffhanger).
